

"Cybercrime Targeting Higher Education What Needs To Be Done"

| Thursday, October 12, 2017

Logicalis US, an international business IT solution provider, shared important insights this week about how cybercriminals are targeting colleges and universities, plus advice on four ways these institutions can strengthen their cybersecurity programs.

Over the past 10 years, we have reported on countless retailers, credit bureaus, insurance companies and other businesses hit by hackers, with millions of customer data records breached. The IT security pros at Logicalis pose the question "What could be worse?" Well, there's a simple two-word answer, they say: Higher Education.

Click here to read the full article from NewsFactor.